

Car Charity at A.F. Hospital

Peter Mills, a night security guard at American Fork Hospital, has given away more than 200 toy cars to children in the Emergency Department over the past two years.

Collecting the cars with the help of his youngest son, Peter has given away Hot Wheels, Matchbox cars, Johnny Lightnings and many others, all to help bring joy to children going through a hard time.

“I’ve given cars to kids with broken arms, which helps them stop crying, and others going out on LifeFlight who grin big enough to break the bank,” Peter says. “Giving cars to kids brings out the ‘grandpa’ in me.”

His giving attitude has become contagious. Nurses at American Fork Hospital have pitched in their own cars as well.
